A STORY OF A BITTER LIFE. MEA JOSEPHINE COLTON'S SUICIDE

EXPLAINED BY HER JOURNAL. The Daily Record that was Set Down by an Abandoned Wife-Her Arrival in New York, and the Discovery of a Rival Hero - The Story of a Second Alleged Marriage.

THE SUN of yesterday contained an account of the death of Mrs. Josephine Colton. no shot herself in her room at 216 Chrystie reet on Monday evening. The story of this unhappy woman's life is told very minutely in record which she kept. From this record it sppears that in 1870 she married William R. Colton in Buffalo, where he had a good home. and received $600 yearly, for what work she does not say. The couple went to Carver, Min-nesota, where they lived until the fall of 1878, when they came to New York and took rooms in a tenement house in Twenty-fourth street. There are two blank books in which Mrs. ton kent her diary. One of them is entirely filed, the other only partially so. The writing and spelling are those of a partially-educated oman. The first book bears on the fly leaf; "Memorandum of my daily life. House 286 West Houston street," The first entry is dated

Sept. 1, and refers to the year 1878. The first

This act seems to have affected Colton somewhat, for she tells of his being with her day after day, and of his kindness. But the dream of happiness was short lived, and she was left alone again. On April 13 she writes:

It is ended, and I shell see him no more. He sent me my money and a note that I need not seek to see him, as he fully intended to live with Mrs. — and I have buried him as much as though I had seen the coffin hid screwed down and the sod yiled on his grave.

This was the last entry in the first volume, On beginning the accord volume on April 20, 1879, she wrote;

FOUR YEARS FOR COSGROVE. SENTENCED AS AN ACCESSORY TO THE DEATH OF CORA SAMMIS.

The Conclusion of an Extremely Painful Case -Fforts to Secure Interession from Gov. Robinson in the Young Man's Behalf.

Miss Cora Sammis of Northport, L. I., an accomplished and attractive girl, went to the house of her aunt, Mrs. Mary Betts of 303 Raymond street, Brooklyn, to pay a short visit, in January last. Frank Cosgrove of 21 St. James place, Brooklyn, the son of a wealthy Burling slip cooper, called upon her there. Miss Sammis and Cosgrove, Mrs. Betts understood, were engaged. On the evening of the 2d of February, Sunday, Cosgrove took tea with Mrs. Betts and Miss Sammis, Miss Sammis, Mrs. Betts says, never appeared in better health and spirits. Cogrove was in a gay mood, and the meai was very agreeable. Cosgrove spent several hours in the parlor with the ladies after supper. On the morning of the 4th of February, Miss Sammis told Mrs. Betts that she intended to pay a short visit to some friends in this city. and bade her an affectionate adieu. Dr. Newton Whitehead of this city informed Inspector Murray, on the 11th of February, that he had been called to attend a young girl lying ill in the house of Mme. Bertha Berger, at 161 East Twenty-seventh street, on the preceding evening, and that he believed service from a manage due to support of the arrangement of the control of the co she was suffering from malpractice. Inspector Murray requested Dr. Whitehead to pay another visit to the sick girl, and to take with him, under the pretence that they were consulting physicians, Coroner Flanagan and Deputy Coroner Cosgrove made no reply, but turned toward Mr. Davenport.

"Your Honor." Mr. Davenport said, "when the prisoner appeared recently at the bar, you kindly gave us time to prepare affidavits in regard to the prisoner's previous good repute, with a view to lessening the severity of the sentence. These affidavits have been in your Honor's hands for several days. I can add netning to them." characteristics of the control through the con

Cosgrave turned from the bar, unmoved. A smile was upon his face as he walked to the prisoners box. Ha believes, it is said, that a pardon from Gov. Robinson will cut his term of imprisonment very short.

NEWARK'S LIQUOR WAR.

Ministers Before the Board of Excise-Barroom Keepers on the Defensive. The Newark Excise Commissioners met in the Common Council chamber yesterday afternoon to consider the applications of barroom keepers for licenses. The Board recently re-solved to prosecute all barroom keepers who did not apply for a license on or before the first week in July, and also published in the local newspapers a list of applicants for license, with a request that citizens should personally enter protests against objectionable barrooms. The pastors of a number of churches read a notice on last Sunday requesting their congregation to appear before the Board of Excise and protest against the licensing of all applicants who keep disorderly houses, violate the Sunday law, or do not bear a good moral character. The Law and Order Association, which has had many barroom keepers indicted for violating the Sunday law, promised to collect evidence against applicants for licenses. It was expected, therefore, that there would be a large attendance at the meeting of the Excise Board yesterday afternoon, but, with the exception of a number of ministers, few appeared. It is said that when it became known that several efficers of a certain bank were members of the Executive Committee of the Law and Order Association many Germans withdrew their denoisits from the bank, and that the barroom keepers and brewers and their friends intend to deal in the same way with all merchants and business firms who are active in the temperance war.

When the Excise Board convened at 4 o'clock on last Sunday requesting their congregation to deal in the same way with all merchants and business firms who are active in the temperanes war.

When the Excise Board convened at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the following-named ministers were seated in the high-back, cushloned chairs of the Aldermen: The Rev. Dr. J. H. McIlvains of the High Street Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. W. J. R. Taylor of the Clinton Avenue Dutch Reformed Church, the Rev. Dr. William T. Findley of the Third Presbyterian Church, the Isev. Dr. J. Howard Smith of the Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church, the Rev. Mr. Parsons of the Eighth Avenue Methodist Episcopal Curch, the Rev. J. H. Dalley of the Halsey Street Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Dr. C. Y. Swan of the South Baptist Church, the Rev. W. V. Kelley of the Clinton Street Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Rev. W. W. McNair, the Secretary of the Law and Order Association.

Commissioner Smith moved that a license be granted to John Neu, the proprietor of the Academy of Music, in which "Pinafore" was played on a Sunday evening. Commissioners Ford and Foster voted no, and the license was not granted.

Ford and Foster voted no, and the license was not granted.

Theodore L. Currie, counsel for the Law and Order Association, read a list of about twenty barroom keepers who had been indicted for selling on Sunday, or have been known to violate the Sunday law. Mr. Currie said he had witnesses to substantiate the protests against granting licenses to the barroom keepers he complained of, some of whom sold beer to minors.

The Rev. Mr. Dalley called attention to nine barrooms within a stone's throw of the Halsey Street Methodist Episcopal Church, in New street, and urged the Board to exercise care in granting licenses to those places.

The Rev. Dr. J. Howard Smith complained of the same barrooms.

The Rev. Dr. J. Howard Smith complained of the same barrooms.
Commissioner Foster informed the ministers that the Board would not grant a license to any barroom keeper who sold liquor or beer to minors on any day. The Board could not collect evidence anginest barroom keepers, because it could not control one dollar or a single policeman. The community must be the detectives.

The Rev. Mr. Parsons complained that beer was sold in grocery stores, and he said that the Board should stop such work, because it was a temptation to women and children who go to the stops after groceries.

temptation to women and children who go to the stores after groceries.

The Board voted to act upon the protest next Tuesday, and they requested the barroom keepers complained of to appear and answer in their own behalf. After the ministers went away, the Board granted 325 licenses.

The Citizens' Protective Association held a secret meeting in the Academy of Music to arrange for resisting the attack of the Law and Order Association. Many brewers, barroom keepers, and conspicuous German citizens were present.

WAR IN A BAPTIST CHURCH

ABOUT TWO LADDERS THAT LEANED AGAINST MR. DURAND'S BARN,

And that were Seized by Deacon Clark, an Elderly, Irasetble, and Estermed Pillar of the Rural Sanctuary now Militant.

WEST MERIDEN, July 8 .- What is known through this city and the adjoining country as "the ladder case " promises to cause an excitement fully equal to that attending the "cherry tree war " in Ansonia. It resembles the famous Ansonia case in that conspicuous members of the same church have become involved in a controversy which has extended to the church, caused a division there, and will undoubtedly result in one or the other of the members being expelled from the church, as was the Hon. Charles Durand of Ansonia, one of the parties to the difficulty which grew out of his cutting limbs off his neighbor's cherry tree, because they grew over the fence boundary and shaded Mr. Durand's grapes so that they would not they grew over the fence boundary and shaded Mr. Durand's grapes so that they would not ripen.

Many members of the Baptist Church here deny that John E. Durand is entitled to prefix "Rev." to his name. Be that as it may, he is so titled in the public prints, and when he visits and makes Sunday school and other addresses in adjoining towns, as he often does, he is invariably styled the Rev. John E. Durand. He is a licentiate of a Waterbury church, and when he removed to Meriden and was accepted in membership in the West Meriden Baptist Church, he claimed the same power to preach that was given him by the Waterbury church. The question is yet in dispute among the higher officials of the Church in this State as to his right.

Deacon Lyman Clark is a wealthy and long-time resident here, and one of the pillars of the same nurch which Mr. Durand attends. He is an elderly gentleman, irascible at times, yet highly estoemed by his brethren. Passing Mr. Durand's residence, he noticed two ladders leaning against the barn. He reconnized them as ladders he called his own. Without delay he summoned one of his men, and the ladders were carried from Mr. Durand's yard to Mr. Clark's.

When Mr. Durand heard of the scizure he be-summoned one of his men, and the ladders were carried from Mr. Durand's yard to Mr. Clark's.

When Mr. Durand heard of the seizure he became highly indignant, and at once invoked the strong arm of the law to recover what he ciaimed as his property. Just before the day set down for a trial before a justice of the peace to decide the ownership of the indders, feilow church members of Messrs. Durand and Clark suggested that the subject be left for arbitration to a church committee, their decision to be final. Accordingly, Mr. Durand chose a brother and Mr. Clark another. It was some time before the two could agree upon a third who would satisfy both, but the choice was at length made.

Thereupon the committee began to sit and dear the case. It is said that they have held a dozen sessions, and are no nearer a report or decision than they were at the close of the first sitting. Mr. Durand undoubtedly bought the ladders of a young painter, but Mr. Clark's claim is that the ladders were his property, the painter, though in possession, not having paid for them. The dispute has narrowed itself down on one or two points to a question of veracity between the brethrer, and, strange to say, they till directly contradictory stories, and each maintains he is telling the truth.

More than this, it is said that Mr. Durand has averred that Mr. Clark is not telling the truth in his desire to possess property that does not belong to him. Mr. Durand has also said that Mr. Clark has ruied the church with an iron rod, and no one has dared to oppose him: but now he (Durand) has got after him, and he not belong to him. Mr. Durand has also said that Mr. Clark has ruled the church with an iron rod, and no one has dared to oppose him; but now he (Durand) has got after him, and he means to "make it warm for the old rascal" (Clark). On the other hand, Mr. Clark's friends say that "old Durand isa fraud, and a disgrace to the church." They add many other thinks derogatory to the reverend gentle man as a man and a church member. These several averments and imputations coming to the ears of the church brethren, they called a special meeting, and after due discussion voted that one or the other of the brothers was in the wrong, and that it was the duty of the church to decide which one. Accordingly, another church committee, composed of five members, was appointed to report which or the two had unjustly accused the other. This committee has held one or two sessions, and is likely to hold many more before getting at all the facts. Some of the older members of the church insist that the member found in the wrong must quit the church.

The stock market was active at the early dealings. There were large sales of Wabash and Kansas City and Northern to realize profits, under which a portion of yesterday's advance was lost.
